

Letter from Mabel Hubbard Bell to Alexander Graham Bell, April 8, 1910, with transcript

Letter from Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell to Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. Washington, April 8, 1910. Alec darling,

In case you don't get off before Wed. here's a word of love.

I want Daisy's water tower to be of tetrahedral construction. Don't you know all the water towers in the country, huge tanks set on top of iron towers. I have seen so many and always longed for the chance of building one of tetrahedrons and here's the chance. It isn't a question of inside or outside works, but of ordinary vis? tetrahedral iron towers. It is lovely here, cool and bright.

Daisy is playing with Barbara, she is at the most attractive age, but she can't understand what legs are for, she puts them side apart puts her hands on the floor between and pushes herself all over with marvelous rapidity.

Must go, much love, Mabel.
